Topic:
People learn better when they feel like they have some control over what and how they learn. When students feel that they can be successful with effort, they invest more in learning. We will first look theoretically at agency. Then we will look at many simple ways to give more control to learners and to allow them to have small successful experiences that can generate enthusiasm and excitement about language learning. In this more workshop portion of the presentation, participants will actually experience several activities and can see for themselves how students might gain agency and enjoyment through them. Student-centered teaching holds that students will learn more if teachers will lecture less and show students how to interact and learn with a variety of people in and out of the classroom. Making students lives the curriculum will also be illustrated.
