

Graduate School of Foreign Language Education and Research

Admissions Policy

The Graduate School of Foreign Language Education and Research's Master's Degree Program seeks to foster the development of highly skilled professionals capable of balancing theory and practice. Consequently, we welcome a broad range of applicants from both Japan and overseas, regardless of background in terms of university, undergraduate program, or program of study, who understand this objective, possess the language proficiency necessary to achieve it, and desire to put the theoretical foundation they have studied in various domains such as foreign language education, multicultural communication, translation, and interpretation to work in a practical setting. The program also strongly welcomes the participation of faculty members at other institutions as part of its mission of offering recurrent education in foreign language instruction.

Our Ph.D. Degree Program seeks to foster the development of researchers and leaders in the various domains it covers. To that end, we welcome a broad range of applicants from both Japan and overseas who possess the competitive ability to make a contribution on the global stage through research as well as advanced teaching ability, including practical skills in the educational setting, and the advanced level of foreign language proficiency needed to carry out research and other practical pursuits.
