概要

“Shadowing” is a kind of listening exercise in which speakers try to listen and speak at the same time. As a technique for language learners, it has been gaining popularity for the last 25 years. One remaining difficulty, however, is how to fit shadowing into a regular curriculum. This presentation will consider the different styles and uses of shadowing in the curriculum, and what kind of learner needs each style fulfills. This will be followed by some examples of how it may be set up as part of regular teaching and learning, as well as some ideas for assessing activities.
