TRANSLANGUAGING AS A PRAGMATICS THEORY OF INFERENCING

Professor Li Wei

Director and Dean of the UCL Institute of
Education (IOE),
Faculty of Education and Society,
University College London (UCL)

Abstract

The notion of Translanguaging has attracted a great deal of attention from researchers and practitioners in different fields ranging from minority language revitalization to translation studies in the last twenty years. In this talk, I focus on Translanguaging as a theory of inferencing in linguistic pragmatics. My particular interest is in the way people interpret novel and creative social media expressions. Implications for theories of Modularity of Mind will be explored.
