Tailoring course text books to maximise learning

A new curriculum with new text books brings with it the challenge of managing the text book effectively. There are both advantages and disadvantages to using a course text book. This faculty development meeting aims to explore these and will focus on how we can overcome the disadvantages by giving real life examples of a current text book in use. What parts to use and what not to use of a textbook will also be discussed. What parts need to be adapted and what parts can stay as they are? These questions will also be focused on in the faculty development meeting.
